

The Houston Scot

Chieftain's Letter,

We had a good turn out for the May meeting. Twenty six members made it to enjoy our speaker, Reverend Dr. Douglas Harper Jr. He provided us with a very entertaining and interesting overview of the Scottish Reformation. Once again, thanks to our Program Director Cheryl May for arranging this program.

Be Sure to come to our
June 26th meeting on Monday at St. Thomas.

Welcome back to Janet Johnson who has recovered well enough from her hip surgery to attend our meetings. We are all so sorry for her on the loss of her daughter Ellen. They have been staunch supporters of our Society for years and hardly ever missed a meeting.

The Kirkin O' the Tartans at Timber Ridge Presbyterian Church went well. Thanks to our Sgt.-at-Arms, Chuck Monteith, for transporting and setting up our tartans and stands. The Church members greatly appreciated our efforts. It is a very nice Church and they are planning on making it an annual event I believe. Hopefully more of our members will be attending next year.

Sorry for being late on getting the newsletter out this month. My job caused me to be out of town training new trooper recruits in Austin for basically three weeks and then I took a couple of days off. I know I am falling down on the job as editor, but I work cheap and eventually get the job done. We are coming up on our summer break and there will not be a July or August issue of 'The Houston Scot'.

As editor of the newsletter I was reminded at the May meeting to remind members who are past due on their membership to hurry up and get your money in so you will still qualify for the member prices on our Burn's Supper tickets. The Past Chieftains and Burns Supper Committee have advised that Burn's Supper ticket prices are probably going to be increasing. Everything is going up these days it seems. Membership dues are used primarily to pay for this newsletter and storage costs for our Society's property. The email version of the newsletter does not cost anything to send out but as editor I spent about $85 to $90 per month to print and mail out just 125 newsletters.

We have some new members and my email newsletter list is growing. Please let me know if you want to start receiving your newsletter electronically. Receiving the newsletter by email saves money for the Society and time for your poor editor.

I know we have a number of members who are unable, for various reasons, to get to our meetings on their own now. It would be great to see these members get a ride to our meetings with other members. Please contact me if you need a ride and I will try to find someone to help you.

Your Chieftain,

Jim Monteith

Timber Ridge Presbyterian Kirkin O' the Tartans

Virginia Staat sent this thank you note to our Society:

Now that I am back home, I wanted to take a few moments to thank you and the entire Heather and Thistle Society for all of your time and efforts in making Timber Ridge's Kirkin' a joyous experience for all. The tartan banners have come to mean so much to us and our Kirkin'. That wave of tartan banners is such a splendid beginning to our service! I appreciate your kindness and generosity in sharing your time with us. It was also wonderful to see you and your family again.

I hope that we can continue to share this wonderful Kirkin' celebration with you and the Heather and Thistle Society members in the future. Thanks again for everything.

Warm wishes,
Virginia

Cattle – Historically, cattle were important indicators of wealth – especially among the Highland Clans and in the Borders. Cattle 'lifting' or rustling were age-old activities, generating much lawlessness. Later both cattle and cattle trade were vital elements in the development of both agriculture and the export economy during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. Pastoral agriculture was always important in the west of Scotland and in the Highlands and islands, but became a major economic activity after the Union in 1707. Early enclosure in the Lowlands was directed at cattle feeding. A significant trade developed during the 18th century from the Highlands to the Lowlands – and further south across the Border to markets in England – invariably over drove roads linking the major 'trysts', or market places, such as that at Falkirk. The later development of steam shipping and ultimately of the railways put an end to the droving trade – but nevertheless pastoral agriculture (both cattle and sheep) remained the mainstay of farming in many parts of Scotland. Houston Highlander Pipe Band

Houston Highlander drummer Scott McPhee recently sent your editor some information about his band and other local pipe bands. I know everyone in the Society loves these pipe bands and wants to know more about them. I have printed his letter to me here.

Hi Jim,

It was a pleasure to have met you. We all had a great time at the Highland Games. As you were asking about the piping community I can share with you of what I know what's going on with some of the bands in the Houston area. Sheriff – A key figure in the judicial system since the twelfth century. By the sixteenth century it had become an hereditary appointment with the extensive duties that it involved, including outlawing criminals, settling territorial disputes or enforcing taxation, being undertaken by various deputies. The Crown rarely tampered with the hereditary aspect of the system and when Charles I (1600-49) did deprive the Gordons and certain other families of their hereditary sheriffdoms it was a highly unpopular action. Thus it was not until the aftermath of the Jacobite Rebellion in 1745-46 that heritable jurisdictions were finally abolished in 1747. Thereafter the country was organized into a series of principal sheriffships with sheriff-substitutes designated for every county town. Today the sheriff-substitute remains the judge before whom both civil and criminal cases are initially heard with more serious charges ultimately being referred to the High Court. (from The Collins Dictionary of Scottish History)

Militia Act – While law and order was threatened by radical ideas after the French Revolution, it was not until the French Revolution and the Napoleonic Wars that Britain was physically threatened by invasion. During the period 1793-97 the French had achieved a number of successes, while Britain experienced mixed fortunes. There was civil unrest – notably in Ireland – and this was aggravated by naval mutinies among the fleet at Spithead, the Nore, and at Yarmouth. The danger of invasion was ever present and to counter this the government implemented a series of emergency measures, including the Militia Act, the Scottish Militia being formed in 1797. The act enforced conscription by ballot for men between eighteen and twenty-three and provoked serious disorder. This arose from the fact that militiamen could be drafted overseas and that most of the middle and upper classes were either Volunteers (and thus exempt from conscription) or could afford to buy themselves out. Anti-militia disturbances broke out in many places, as 'Scotland went stark mad', according to one contemporary. Schoolmasters, who had to draw up lists of men for the militia ballot had their homes ransacked and parish registers destroyed. The most serious riot occurred at Tranent, East Lothian, where colliers and salters resisted the ballot. The disturbance was ruthlessly suppressed by troops, with eleven person killed and several wounded. Order was restored by the end of the year and further inducements of favourable pay and pensions offered to those who would enlist. The quotas for the Scottish Militia were eventually fixed in March 1798, but it was not until 7 months later that all of the 6,000 men were at last mobilized. (from The Collins Scottish Dictionary)
